On the street, smarter is safer

Ryan Smith
» redeye@tribune.com

Being punched in the face for an iPhone is not pleasant. Regrettably, I'm one of the growing number of victims who can say this from personal experience.

A couple of weeks ago, I was mugged on a quiet afternoon in my cozy Old Irving Park neighborhood. I made the mistake of entering what I call The Smart Phone Zone—in which I tried to walk, listen to a podcast and tweet at the same time.

Meanwhile, two large men in hoodies silently sprinted up to me from behind. Before I had a chance to turn around, one of them began punching me in the head and knocking me to the ground while the other kicked me and ripped my iPhone 4 from my hands.

I'm sporting a bump on my head, a sprained thumb and sore ribs, but otherwise, I'm alive and writing this column.

Coincidentally, just days after I was assaulted, Wisconsin's new concealed carry law went into effect, leaving Illinois as the only state that prohibits citizens from carrying concealed weapons in public. So the question is: If I had been allowed to pack heat, would things have turned out differently?

After I shared my harrowing tale, some of my family, friends, neighbors and complete strangers told me that a gun could have solved everything.

"That's RIDICULOUS!" a passionate neighbor of mine barked as I held an icepack to my temple. "We really should be allowed to carry guns in Chicago. That's the only way we can protect ourselves from this menace!"

And a friend of mine insisted the country's crime rate would plummet if everyone were to carry a handgun.

Yet in spite of my experience, I still believe that owning a gun wouldn't solve any problems and, frankly, could make things worse.

In my case, even if I were carrying a gun when I was attacked, I still wouldn't have had a chance to pull it out until they were running away. Then would I really feel justified shooting these thugs in the back for a bruised head and a stolen iPhone? And what if they had wrestled a gun away from me like they did my iPhone?

My friend countered that if criminals feared that more people were hiding guns in their pants, they'd be less likely to commit crimes, but the stats indicate otherwise.

According to the FBI's online crime statistics, the number of murders, assaults and robberies in Chicago all dropped from 1985 (the agency's first year of online stat-keeping) through 2009. (The city's handgun ban went into effect in 1982 and was ruled unconstitutional by the Supreme Court in 2010.)

If there's something I should be afraid of, it's runaway buses and falling anvils. According to the CDC, homicide is the 15th-leading cause of death in America, while unintentional accidents are No. 5. We don't stop driving cars or taking public transportation because of the danger of accidents, so why should we alter our lives on the slim chance of a random crime?

I'm not going to judge people who feel more secure with guns in their homes, but as for myself, I just plan to be more cautious. Chicago isn't always a peaceful paradise, and texting and walking at the same time (wexting?) rarely is a good idea. All bets are off if the zombie apocalypse happens, but for now, I'll keep my weapons Nerf in nature.

RYAN SMITH IS A REDEYE SPECIAL CONTRIBUTOR.

“Yet in spite of my experience, I still believe that owning a gun wouldn't solve any problems and, frankly, could make things worse.”

Home leveled in explosion

Chicago Tribune

An apparent gas explosion obliterated a home on the Southwest Side on Sunday morning, critically injuring the couple inside and leaving neighbors haunted by the images that followed the blast.

With tears pooling in his eyes, neighbor Rudy Venegas remembered seeing a man run away from the smoking wreckage of the 1½-story bungalow just after the explosion rocked the 6600 block of South Keating Avenue about 6:30 a.m.

"He was smoldering," Venegas said. "I couldn't touch him. ... I told him to lie down."

A woman in her 50s and a man in his 40s were taken in critical condition to a local hospital, fire and officials said. The Chicago Fire Department did not give the victims' names, and relatives and rescue personnel on the scene gave conflicting identifications.

It also was unclear which hospital was treating the victims. No deaths were reported in the incident.

A third person, a male who was in the house, took himself to a hospital, Fire Department spokesman Larry Langford said. The extent of his injuries was unknown.

Neighbors in West Lawn described seeing people burned, with their clothes "hanging off them" after the blast, Langford said. The smell of gas lingered in the air after the house blew up, and gas was believed to be the cause, he said.

Crews from Peoples Gas were investigating, and they were expected to restore service to all houses around the site by Sunday night, said Bonnie Johnson, a company spokeswoman.

Next door to the house, Doreetha Wheatley woke to an explosion that shattered her windows. Wheatley, 38, along with her husband and four children, climbed out their front window because flames were blocking the front door. Along with another home next to the one that exploded, the Wheatleys' house was badly damaged.

- » For the second time in a week, burglars broke into a Greek Orthodox church on the Near North side and made off with cash and other items including a crucifix, church officials and police said.
- » A 6-year-old boy was accidentally shot and critically wounded by his 13-year-old uncle during a game of "cops and robbers," according to family members.
- » Three people, including two from Chicago's suburbs and one Illinois football player, were shot Sunday morning at a party near the University of Illinois campus, officials said. TRIBUNE

Penn State coach: Game helped heal

1 Fans packed Penn State's football stadium Saturday, cheering the Nittany Lions for the first time since child sexual abuse allegations rocked the university and led to the ouster of its president and its iconic football coach.

The Nittany Lions lost the game—the first contest in 46 years without Joe Paterno as head coach—17-14 to Nebraska. But the man who replaced Paterno said the actions of fans and players Saturday sent a message against sexual abuse.

"It was a day of solidarity for the children, for the victims—it was a touching moment," interim coach Tom Bradley said of emotional pregame ceremonies focused on child abuse. "I felt that today, just maybe, the healing process started to begin."

Shooting suspect

2 Police have issued an arrest warrant for a 21-year-old man they believe was involved in a recent shooting between the White House and Washington Monument. Oscar Ortega is wanted in connection to Friday night's shooting, which did not lead to any injuries but did rattle people in a district often full of tourists.

Italy nominates PM

3 Economist Mario Monti was nominated Sunday to replace Silvio Berlusconi as Italy's prime minister, presidential spokesman Donato Marra said. Berlusconi resigned Saturday amid the country's ongoing financial crisis.

Occupy crackdown

Portland Police arrested more than 50 people Sunday as the authorities cleared out and blocked off encampments of the Occupy movement that has been protesting economic issues nationwide.

The Portland actions were among several by authorities around the country over the weekend to try to close down encampments occupied by demonstrators for weeks.

Encampments sprang up in several cities in recent weeks in solidarity with the Occupy Wall Street movement that began in New York in September to protest what demonstrators see as economic inequality and undue influence over U.S. politics by corporate interests.

In Portland the authorities had issued an eviction notice, and then moved to empty the camps and fence them off. Many protesters left on their own after the notice, but others chose to stay.

A police statement said: "The Portland Police Bureau has cleared both Chapman and Lownsdale Square parks. During today's operation, more than 50 arrests were made of people who either wanted to be arrested or refused to leave Chapman Square."

After the parks were cleared demonstrators regrouped in the streets, blocking traffic in a standoff with police.

ELSEWHERE

In Philadelphia, Mayor Michael Nutter said he was increasing police presence near the Occupy Philly camp and asking the police commissioner to "establish structures and strategic positioning and deployment of officers on a regular basis in that location."

What began as a peaceful protest 39 days ago has given way to increasing public safety and public health concerns, Nutter told reporters.

Meanwhile, in Salt Lake City, police said on Twitter that 19 people were arrested Saturday night as authorities moved in to clear an Occupy Salt Lake encampment at a downtown park.

Police had ordered protesters to leave the park after a man was found dead late Thursday night. The cause of death was thought to be carbon monoxide poisoning and a drug overdose.

THE DIGIT

40

The death toll from Wednesday's 5.6-magnitude earthquake in eastern Turkey has risen to 40, the government said Sunday. A much deadlier 7.2 magnitude quake that tore through Van last month left 604 people dead, officials said. Twenty-six people have been rescued following Wednesday's quake.

RedEye

Orange you glad the Bears wore those jerseys Sunday?

Ugh. Sorry.

For the second time this season, the Bears donned their orange jerseys, and the results were about as good as they could have hoped.

So, how did orange help the Bears? Let us count the ways.

NFC NORTH	W	L	GB
Green Bay	8	0	0
BEARS	6	3	2.5
Detroit	6	3	2.5
Minnesota	2	6	6

CHRIS SWEDA/TRIBUNE

Orange Julius

Bears defensive end Julius Peppers forces a Calvin "Megatron" Johnson turnover with a vicious, pro wrestling-style clothesline on the Lions' first drive. Brian Urlacher recovers, and the Bears jump out to a 7-0 lead on a Matt Forte touchdown run four plays later.

Orange flash

For one day, that's Devin Hester's nickname. The Bears wide receiver/kick returner torched the Lions for a punt return touchdown less than a minute into the second quarter to give the Bears a commanding 20-0 lead. BRIAN CASSELLA/TRIBUNE

Orange Peppers

Yes, again with a play on Peppers' name. That's because for the second time in the Lions' first two series, the long arms of Julius come up big. With the Lions moving swiftly on the ground and the air, Peppers breaks up a Matthew Stafford pass, slowing Detroit's momentum.

Orange punch

The Lions look like they are getting things together as Nate Burleson catches a 22-yard pass from Stafford, but cornerback Tim Jennings (left) punches the ball out and recovers the fumble. The Bears make the Lions pay, turning the turnover into a Robbie Gould field goal.

SCOTT STRAZZANTE/TRIBUNE

Orange pickin'

Touchdowns don't grow on trees, but the interception return for a touchdown by Major Wright early in the third quarter was about as easy as they come. It put the Bears up comfortably 27-6.

THE GOOD, THE BAD AND THE UGLY THIS WEEK IN THE NFL

Here's the situation. You are a Dallas Cowboys cheerleader. (You're not, but just go with it.) Your boyfriend is a Buffalo Bills wide receiver. The two teams are playing each other Sunday.

Whom do you cheer for?

Kelsi Reich, the Cowboys cheerleader in question, was faced with that dilemma Sunday. For her, though, it just might have been a win-win. Her team won easily. And her boyfriend, David Nelson, caught a touchdown pass for the Bills.

Hip, hip, hooray.

OH YES

Tony Romo

Dallas quarterback Romo wasn't impressed with Nelson's touchdown. Romo torched the Bills for almost 300 yards and three touchdowns in the Cowboys' win. Checkmate.

OH NO

Curtis Painter

The quarterback with the unfortunate job of filling in for Indianapolis Colts legend Peyton Manning got good news and bad news Sunday. The bad news? He was benched. The good news? He's out of Manning's shadow.

UH-OH

Denver running backs

1 Matt Forte says his "play has been speaking for me." What's it saying?

"I take cash, credit card, gold bullion, dragon eggs ..."

That old Luda lyric: "Champaign for my campaign let me do the damn thing. What's my name ..."

I just hope he stops "fumbling" with his words.

"Show me the money!"

"I'm good enough, I'm smart enough, and doggone it, Jerry Angelo—SHOW ME THE MONEY!"

2 Rex Grossman keeps coming back. How does he do it?

Fortunately for him, the Redskins have designed their game plan around the forward-bouncing pass.

He's the only one who will wash the team dishes. Related: Doing dishes sucks.

There are lots of things that you can catch in bars that keep coming back.

A steady diet of booze and breads.

He's the "Police Academy" of QBs. Liked him first, still chuckle at him, but overall not good and won't go away.

3 The Blackhawks are among the league's best. What's your excitement level at?

I've found myself using the word "Hjalmarsson" at least three times a day.

Smack-dab between getting a booty call at 1 a.m. and listening to "Ima Boss" on repeat. HYPED.

I'm at "Alex Quigley" level and ready to say the Stanley Cup is in the bag!

Not as excited as United Center employees who still have jobs because of the Hawks.

So excited—I've been playing "shoot the puck" at home.

4 The fate of the NBA season might be decided Monday. Got a prediction?

After hours of intense negotiation, both sides will agree that the GMT-Master II is the only Rolex worth owning.

No ball until 2012. But hey, there haven't been balls on either side since July.

I SAID THE BLACKHAWKS WILL WIN THE STANLEY CUP! Wait ... what?

See ya next season, guys.

Like a Carlos Boozer break-away, it should be a slam dunk. Or he could trip on a gym bag. Anything's possible.

5 How could the Penn State scandal get worse before it gets better?

I feel like those guys kind of bottom out at "failing the entire country in addition to your victims and your institution."

People can keep missing the point? IT'S NOT ABOUT JOEPA, it's about passing the buck and not standing up for what's right.

The student body can come down with a persistent case of the "sexy Rex-ies."

Not gonna make a crack about this one. Tragically, I'm sure it will get worse.

Had a Ron Zook joke originally, but won't do it. My best to the victims of this horrific story.

Can the latest joining of sports star, celeb vixen buck the trend?

RedEye

It doesn't matter if you've never heard of Kroy Biermann of the Atlanta Falcons or Kim Zolciak of "The Real Housewives of Atlanta." The couple got married Friday, proving that some people don't learn from others' mistakes.

Biermann and Zolciak join a slew of other couples who have tried to combine the sports world and the celebrity world and emerge unscathed. Unlike these couples, who crashed and burned.

Kris Humphries and Kim Kardashian

Sure, the reality starlet and the NBA player might have entered into a "fake" marriage in the first place, but they perhaps are the gold standard for disastrous sports-entertainment mergers.

Tony Romo and Jessica Simpson

The Dallas Cowboys quarterback was sacked by his own fans after his relationship with the singer became public. Soon enough, she was being blamed for the team's failures, becoming the Yoko Ono of the Cowboys.

Tony Parker and Eva Longoria

Another Tony from Texas, Parker and Longoria of "Desperate Housewives" made it work for seven years before they divorced in January.

CELEB IMPORTS

HOLLYWOOD IS SAYING 'SI' TO SOME OF MEXICO'S MOST POPULAR ACTORS

Los Angeles Times

A few years ago, Eugenio Derbez, Mexico's most popular comic actor, got some well-meaning advice from a Hollywood executive that still makes him smile.

Derbez was playing a key secondary role in Patricia Riggen's "Under the Same Moon," a Fox Searchlight drama about a Mexican mother, played by Kate del Castillo, forced to leave her young son in her native village while she searches for work in L.A. Derbez's otherwise serious character had a couple of lighthearted moments in the movie, and the studio honcho was impressed.

"He told me, 'You should try comedy, because I think you have a lot of potential,'" recalled Derbez, now 48, who by that point had written, produced or starred on many Mexican TV shows, including the long-running sitcom "Vecinos" ("Neighbors"). He also was well known to U.S. Latinos for numerous TV and movie roles, notably as the goofy patriarch of the comically dysfunctional "La Familia P. Luche" ("The Plush Family"), which originated on Mexican TV and became a hit for the Miami-based, Spanish-language Univision Network.

"It was so funny," Derbez said good-naturedly. "It was like if somebody in Mexico said to Jim Carrey, 'You ought to be a comedian!'"

These days, Hollywood is getting better acquainted with the varied talents of Derbez and other prominent actors from Mexico who increasingly are turning up in U.S.-made movies and high-rated TV shows such as Telémundo's "La Reina del Sur" and the Venevisión-Univision co-produced "Eva Luna" as well as in advertisements, awards ceremonies and on theater stages.

Derbez, for example, co-hosted last fall's Latin Grammy Awards in Las Vegas, appears in "Jack and Jill" with Adam Sandler and Katie Holmes, and recently visited L.A. to film a CBS comedy pilot starring Rob Schneider as a lifelong bachelor who marries into a close-knit Mexican-American family.

A number of factors are driving the influx to Hollywood of bilingual Mexican actors, whose ranks include Demian Bichir ("Weeds," "A Better Life"), Adriana Barraza ("Babel," "Thor"), Ana de la Reguera (who co-starred in this summer's sci-fi Western "Cowboys & Aliens" with Daniel Craig and Harrison Ford), Blanca Soto (a former Miss Mexico who appeared in "Dinner for Schmucks"), Ana Claudia Talancón ("One Missed Call") and "Under the Same Moon's" Del Castillo ("Weeds," "La Reina del Sur").

Most obviously, there's the surging number of Latinos in the U.S.—about 50 million, or some 16 percent of the total population. According to the Motion Picture Association of America, Latinos bought more movie tickets per capita in 2009 than any other ethnic group.

Such numbers have led to a flourishing Spanish-language and bilingual entertainment market, creating opportunities not only for U.S.-born Latinos but also for bilingual

Known for: The corrupt Tijuana Mayor Esteban Reyes on Showtime's "Weeds" and Fidel Castro in Steven Soderbergh's two-part Che Guevara epic, "The Argentine" and "Guerrilla."

'I'M NOT CLOSING DOORS IN

Few Mexican actors have been able to work both sides of the border better than Demian Bichir, a Mexico City native and member of a well-known acting family.

Although as a teenager he'd already launched a promising TV and film career in Mexico, at 22 he decided to move to New York to learn English and eventually break into U.S. theater and film roles. Initially, he helped support himself by working as a bartender and waiter, just like tens of thousands of his countrymen.

"Everyone thought I was crazy," Bichir said. "Everyone in Mexico, not only my parents but everyone, because I had my place there and my name. And I told them, 'I'm still going to Latin American actors, particularly those with proven box-office power and built-in fan bases across the hemisphere.

Moctesuma Esparza, a film producer and chief executive of the L.A.-based Maya Cinemas movie theater chain, which caters to Latino audiences, said the burgeoning Latino youth population makes it "inevitable" that more Latin American actors will be drawn to find work in Hollywood.

Esparza sees that trend as a boon for Latino audiences. "You want to be able as an American Latino to see anybody who at least looks like you, has a last name like you, who you can identify with," he said. "At the same time," Esparza continued, the success of Latin American actors in Hollywood "does not satisfy the aspirations of American Latinos, nor do I believe it satisfies the need for diversity of the industry in this country."

Mexican acting talent also is being driven to Hollywood by Mexico's creatively limited television market, which serves up a steady diet of soap operas, sports and comedy programs but little else in the way of original programming.

Meanwhile, the Mexican movie industry, after hitting an artistic peak in the late 1990s and early 2000s with such films as "Amores Perros" and "Y Tu Mama Tambien," went into a production slump, generating only 25 feature films in 2005. That number rebounded last year to 68, according to the Camara Nacional de la Industria Cinematografica.

James McNamara, head of Pantelion Films, a joint venture of Lionsgate and Mexico's Televisa media conglomerate that produces movies aimed at Latinos and Latin Americans, said Hollywood always has drawn established stars from around the globe, including Spaniards such as Antonio Banderas, Penelope Cruz and Javier Bardem. Mexican actors, like those from other countries, are attracted to Hollywood's bigger budgets and larger infrastructure, he said. "It's just a natural human tendency to aspire to the major leagues."

One challenge for Pantelion, McNamara said, is to make sure that the star Mexican actors in its films appeal sufficiently to younger, second- and third-generation, U.S.-born Latinos who may not know the actors or have not been following their careers as long as their parents or grandparents.

The greater array of stateside acting opportunities drew Soto, the former beauty queen, to New York in the late 1990s to model, learn English and study acting. She now lives in L.A. with her writer-director-producer-actor husband, Jack Hartnett, and alternates between English-language movie parts and Spanish-language telenovelas, including the lead role in "Eva Luna," the highest-rated U.S.-produced telenovela in history and the fourth most-watched Monday prime-time program on all U.S. broadcast TV.

She's part of the growing group of native Spanish-speaking performers as well as directors, cinematographers and other industry professionals living permanently in Southern California.

"I love my country," Soto said, but "do I want to be there for the next 35 years of my life being a novela actress? No. I want to live in Japan, in Spain, I want to go to France and work here, in New York, in Miami."

MY OWN COUNTRY'

have that, because I'm not quitting; I'm not closing my doors in my own country."

This summer he starred as an undocumented immigrant gardener, struggling to secure a piece of the American Dream for himself and his teenage son in Chris Weitz's L.A. drama "A Better Life."

He has maintained his career in Mexican and other Spanish-language film and television, including a TV miniseries performance as revolutionary leader Emiliano Zapata. Like many famous Mexican actors, when he's strolling L.A.'s streets or eating at a restaurant in the city, he's as likely to be recognized by Spanish-speaking waiters as by an English-speaking Hollywood peer.

LOS ANGELES TIMES

Filmmaker and Chicago native Carmen Marron on the set of her movie "Go For It!"

From Logan Square to the big screen

By Kyle Kramer

FOR REDEYE

Chicago native Carmen Marron was working as a guidance counselor in Phoenix when she decided to make a film addressing the experience of Latino teenagers. "Go For It," the dance drama that she wrote, directed and produced herself, was released earlier this year by Pantelion Films, a division of Lionsgate. It came out on DVD this fall.

We caught up with Marron by phone from her home in L.A. to talk about her film projects and the state of Latino film.

Why did you feel that it was important to set "Go For It" in Chicago?

I wrote about inner-city living of young adults and what it was like. ... You know, I grew up in Logan Square, and I wanted to keep that feeling. I always felt, also, like Chicago was a great representation of most of the country. This Midwest, big town but sometimes a small town, family feel.

As a Latino filmmaker, what are some of the important themes of identity that emerge in your work?

Definitely the identity was a huge theme for the lead, Aimee Garcia, [who] was my lead actress. ... The theme was finding your own identity as a kid growing up in the U.S. and in Chicago, but also hanging on to your culture and adapting them both. Not forsaking one for the other but just finding that blend that makes you who you are, makes you so unique as a Latina. Which is what I went through, growing up, and what I see a lot of kids go through.

How do you think Latinos are represented in film right now?

Latinos are definitely grossly underrepresented. I mean, it's a given and everyone talks about it, with the ratio of how big of a population that we are. The majority of films that you see, the Latinos that are in them are either gardeners, housewives, cooks, drivers, valet employees that park your cars. Or they're gangbangers. You watch these big blockbuster films and you see how that's how we're represented. ... Right now there's Penelope Cruz, Jennifer Lopez—you could probably count on one hand how many Latino leading ladies there are. It really is low.

What are the things that are holding it back in Hollywood?

You have to support the films because it's nothing personal. In the end it's all about money. It truly is. It's about business. The only way we're going to see change is if films that are with Latino cast members as leads, when they open up on weekends, people go and watch them and they hit great numbers.

PEOPLE YOU SHOULD KNOW

Isaac Showaki 27, Logan Square Gig: Co-founder of 5 Rabbit

With less than six months under their collective belt, Isaac Showaki and his partners at Chicago's 5 Rabbit Cerveceria are busy rolling out their latest creations for the Latin microbrewery. Released in late October, the fourth brew is called Vida y Muerte and is made with dulce de leche and hoja santa (an herb used in Oaxacan cuisine). Next, it's on to their holiday release, which Showaki describes as featuring "one of our favorite Latin ingredients, Flor de Jamaica or Hibiscus flower."

What first got you interested in beer and brewing?

I worked as a strategy consultant for six years and one of my first projects was with a brewery in Panama. I immediately fell in love with the industry, the people, the business and the smell of the malt in the morning. After that my partner, Andres, and I were staffed in a lot of brewery projects and we became the experts in the field. We just loved the challenges involved in a brewery.

What is your favorite fall beer?

Our Vida y Muerte Ale—when people try it for the first time they always say they've never tried anything like this. The milk caramel is very subtle and you get a beautiful aroma in the nose. It is a well-balanced beer that goes great with meats like a bratwurst, creamy cheese and pasta with white sauces.

What are your favorite beer bars in Chicago?

There are so many great beer bars in the city, but we have a few favorites. Map Room, Hopleaf, Bad Apple and Maria's are some of our favorites. All of them have a great beer selection, but it depends on your mood. If you are looking for great food, Bad Apple makes an amazing burger and their cheese curds are to die for. If you just want to hang out and have a great beer, the Map Room is my favorite place.

ROMANCE PLANET

BY JENNIFER SHEPHERD | READ MORE AT LIPSTICKMYSTIC.COM

Scorpio Oct. 24-Nov. 21
The sun is urging you to confess your latest sexual misdeeds to a good friend. Sometimes you need to talk things out before you can start to understand the truth of your situation. Why oh why did you move in with that guy 12 hours after meeting him?

Sagittarius Nov. 22-Dec. 21
Two sexy friends are offering you more temptation than you can handle. Maybe you're in love with one and in lust with the other. Mercury says don't mess things up, since one of them could turn out to be a real soulmate.

Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 19
With the moon opposite your sign, you could be losing confidence in the bedroom. Suddenly, you can't find your honey's sensitive spots. Or you're falling asleep too early. You'll get your groove back soon.

Aquarius Jan. 20-Feb. 18
You're under a lot of pressure, courtesy of three intense planets. If you're in a relationship, your partner could be making impossible demands. If you're single, your family members could be offering unwanted advice.

Pisces Feb. 19-March 20
Mars is the planet of action and aggression, and right now, it's opposite your sign. This means you have the energy levels of a slug. Your partner could grow annoyed since you insist on video games and takeout food every night.

Aries March 21-April 19
Two sassy planets mean you don't give a poop what people think about you. You'll dance around your apartment naked singing Lady Gaga songs with the window shades wide open.

Taurus April 20-May 20
Remember that guy you met months ago who said you should give him a call? Now's the time to follow through on those enticing early moments. Mars says don't be shy.

Gemini May 21-June 21
The moon is warning you to slow things down. You could be getting hot and heavy with someone who is the worst person in the world for you.

Cancer June 22-July 22
Your creative energies are strong right now, thanks to the sun. You'll draw a nude sketch of your lover while he or she is sleeping. Do something madly romantic.

Leo July 23-Aug. 22
Some of your friends could be trying to set you up with someone, and you're playing shy for no good reason. Mercury is urging you to get out there and be social. You might discover that you and a sexy stranger share hot chemistry.

Virgo Aug. 23-Sept. 22
With Mercury preparing to go into retrograde, you're not quite sure where you stand with a relationship. It's best to withhold judgment for another three weeks.

Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 23
Sometimes being honest is your worst flaw. You'll tell your lover what you really think of her mother. Saturn says try to be more tactful.

'Shameless' stars make the most of short stay in Chicago

"The Chicago Code" and "The Playboy Club" didn't make it to a second season, but fellow Chicago-based TV series "Shameless" did. And it has been filming exterior scenes for Season 2—which premieres Jan. 8 on Showtime—in Chicago since Nov. 7.

As was the case in Season 1, North Lawn-dale on the West Side has served as the setting for the Gallagher family's neighborhood. Filming also has taken place at the Chicago and Franklin "L" station, inside Trump International Hotel & Tower and around the Riverwalk.

When they aren't shooting, the cast members have taken advantage of their time in Chicago by shopping and dining out. Emmy Rossum (Fiona Gallagher) and Justin Chatwin (Steve) checked out The Scout Waterhouse + Kitchen in the South

NEXT UP

Shooting in Chicago is expected to wrap Monday for "Shameless." The cast, including William H. Macy (Frank Gallagher), will tape an episode of "The Rosie Show" at Harpo Studios on Tuesday.

Loop on Tuesday. Rossum also shopped at Sofia boutique in the Gold Coast on Friday along with Shanola Hampton (Veronica Fisher) and picked up diamond earrings, among other things. "I'm going to wear my earrings out on the town tonight!" Rossum tweeted.

They joined co-stars Cameron Monaghan (Ian Gallagher), Jeremy Allen White (Lip Gallagher) and Steve Howey (Kevin Ball) for a cast dinner at Paris Club later that night. Afterward, some of the cast headed upstairs to Studio Paris, where they were joined by Chatwin, who had attended the Blackhawks-Calgary game at the United Center that night. Rossum and Hampton had brunch at Joe's Seafood, Prime Steak & Stone Crab the next morning.

It appears the cast hasn't taken a break from working out during their stay in Chicago. Rossum took a spinning class Nov. 7 at Gold Coast cycling studio Flywheel, which, according to her tweet, "kicked my BUTT!" Chatwin did yoga at Exhale Spa in the Gold Coast on Wednesday.

ALSO SPOTTED

» Jay Cutler and Kristin Cavallari dined at Joe's Seafood, Prime Steak & Stone Crab on Friday and then hung out at Public House afterward. Kate Gosselin and her bodyguard had dinner at Joe's on Wednesday, as did the Cubs' Kerry Wood and the Atlanta Hawks' Kirk Hinrich, separately.

» "Little Miss Sunshine" star Abigail Breslin and former "The Hills" cast member Whitney Port shopped, separately, at Sofia on Saturday.

» Morrissey stopped by The Globe Pub on Wednesday.

» The Dallas Mavericks' Shawn Marion dined at Japonais on Friday. The Cleveland Cavaliers' Baron Davis partied at Enclave that night.

» Keith Sweat hosted a private listening party for his newest album, "Til the Morning," at Angels & Kings in the Hard Rock Hotel on Wednesday.

$32 million

That's how much "Immortals" earned at the domestic box office to finish No. 1 in its opening weekend. "Jack and Jill" was second with $26 million.

Rocawear reversal

Don't mess with the Occupy Wall Street folks. That's what Jay-Z learned after pulling an "Occupy All Streets" T-shirt from his Rocawear fashion website over the weekend in the wake of complaints that he would not be sharing proceeds with Occupy protesters, according to eonline.com. No comment yet from Jay or Rocawear.

'Duty' calls

How strong is the call to "Call of Duty: Modern Warfare 3"? The video game, released last week, sold 6.5 million copies in its first day in stores in the U.S. and the U.K., the game's publisher, Activision, reported. That translates to more than $400 million in a single day.

I see you

"Avatar" star Zoe Saldana and fiancé Keith Britton (right) have split, her rep confirmed to people.com, describing the breakup as amicable after 11 years together. The rep said Saldana and entrepreneur Britton will continue to run the website My Fashion Database together.
